The Women Higher Education for Peace Vienna Forum is part of a wider initiative entitled Women Scholarship for Peace: Global South, aimed at providing high-quality training courses for women from the Global South.

The gap in disarmament and non-proliferation education is evident with respect to early career professionals, particularly women. The discrepancy in gender appears to decrease only slowly and in certain specific areas women continue to represent a very small percentage of those individuals working and making decisions on issues related to disarmament, non-proliferation and peace.

Objectives of the Forum

- To encourage solution-oriented debates addressing the gender-gap in disarmament and non-proliferation
- To enhance women's capacity to address issues related to disarmament and non-proliferation, including related technologies and services
- To contribute to the participation of women in decision-making processes
- To highlight opportunities for career development and networking

About the Women Scholarship for Peace

- Scholarships were made available for women from the Global South
- Out of 180 applications, 30 early career women professionals were selected. They come from 30 different countries and various professional fields

Contributing to the following Sustainable Development Goals:
